

Accusoft Releases New HTML5 Document Viewer for SharePoint 2013

Accusoft today announces the release of Prizm Content Connect for SharePoint, a new version of its industry-leading HTML5 document viewer that integrates seamlessly into Microsoft's SharePoint 2013 collaboration environment.

Prizm Content Connect for SharePoint brings a best-in-class document viewing experience to SharePoint 2013. With no software required on end-user devices other than an HTML5 browser (even on mobile devices), the new version can display hundreds of different file types straight from SharePoint lists, including PDFs, Microsoft Office files, CAD drawings, and many other formats.

The new release features viewer-based collaboration tools, including annotation and redaction, and digital rights management (DRM) controls. Viewing, annotating, redacting and DRM protection of current and previous versions of documents is enabled through support for SharePoint's document versioning features.

Through Prizm Content Connect for SharePoint, users can publish redacted documents to the SharePoint Document Library and route them through a workflow based on assigned metadata values, or convert and publish any supported file type as a PDF. The release also features a RESTful Web API optimized to provide fast viewer performance and quick response times.

"With the advent of mobile and the range of devices in the market proliferating in the Enterprise, our clients have a pressing need to support the ever-increasing variety of document formats in any browser on any device, at any time," says Joseph Giegerich, president and managing partner of SharePoint solutions developer Gig Werks. "Accusoft's seamless integration with SharePoint 2013 delivers this badly needed requirement to our clients via an HTML5 viewing experience that is intuitive and fast for users while driving enormous cost savings for the Enterprise."
